- One on a corpse in the tunnel from Majula to Forest of Fallen Giants, in the water.
- One after the lone Old Ironclad Soldier in Forest of Fallen Giants, along with a Lifegem: in order to find it, go right and up the stairs.

- One after dropping down from the platform with the lever that calls the ship in No-man's Wharf.
- Three on a ledge in the Ruin Sentinels arena in the Lost Bastille.
- Three can be found in Grave of Saints on the second floor.
- One in the room with bell-ringing hollows in Undead Crypt. (three at Bonfire Intensity 2+)

Enemy Drops

Notes

- This item, along with the Darksign, Aged Feather, and the Miracle Homeward will warp you back to the spawn gazebo in Things Betwixt if both the Fire Keeper's Dwelling in Things Betwixt and The Far Fire in Majula are unlit, potentially as a softlock prevention measure and/or a default warp location.
- Warping with a Homeward Bone / Aged Feather / Darksign / Homeward will not cause you to rest at the bonfire, but it will reset the world and all enemies as if you had.
 - This means a Homeward Bone / Aged Feather / Darksign are safe to use during "no bonfire" runs, and Homeward is safe on NG+ "no bonfire" runs.
 - Since all enemies will be restored and you will not be, you will usually want to immediately rest after using Homeward Bone / Aged Feather / Darksign / Homeward.
- Even if you avoid resting at bonfires or using Homeward Bone / Aged Feather / Darksign / Homeward, enemies can respawn if you get far enough away that an area is unloaded. This distance is much further than in Dark Souls. If you run from Majula to Vendrick at the end of Undead Crypt and then back, only Shaded Woods will have been reloaded - Shrine of Amana and Drangleic Castle will be the way you left them.
- Warping with a Homeward Bone / Aged Feather / Darksign / Homeward will cause any summon signs you placed to disappear, no matter how short the distance you warp.
