Description

Like Sparkly and Snuggly from Demon's Souls and Dark Souls 1, a trading mechanic through an unseen bird has returned. This time it is a duo, who request smooth and silky items as you approach their nest.

They are commonly assumed by the community to be crows, though the official name of "Hawk Girl" and "Double-Winged Hawk Girl" in the previous titles casts some doubt as to what exactly these mysterious creatures are meant to be.

Location

Things Betwixt

From the bonfire outside the Old Firekeepers house, head towards Majula. Take the first fog door on the left and bear left. You will eventually come across the nest.
Be sure to knock the ladder down to create a shortcut.

How to Trade

- Drop items in the nest one at a time.
  - Multiple items may be dropped in bulk as long as the quantity is one at a time, bundles will be lost otherwise.
  - The resulting trade will contain all corresponding returned items at once.
- Items must be inside the nest to register.
- You must use the leave command, not discard, or the item will simply disappear.
- It is also worth noting that in contrary to Demon's Souls and Dark Souls you don't have to reload the game in order for the trade to be completed. It is instantaneous and as soon as you drop the item and skip the dialogue with the Sisters you can pick up whatever they gave you in exchange.

- There seems to be a limit on how many items can be on the ground at once. First dropped, first removed from the world once the limit has been reached. The limit is somewhere between 25 and 50, so don't drop too many items before picking up your loot.

Available Trades

Dyna and Tillo accept four different items for trade. They include the following:

- Prism Stones
- Small Smooth & Silky Stones
- Smooth & Silky Stones
- Petrified Somethings

Ordered from worst to best, the sisters will gift various randomized items depending on what was dropped, with a higher probability for better returns from the better drops.
